

Does God go before us in our everyday lives? You know He does and I know in every way He Does. Just a few hours ago, less than twelve, I had just picked up my truck from the repair shop, expecting it to be pepped up and ready to roll. Well, it spit and sputtered a few times and then it dropped into its "I am here and ready to serve" mode, and it took off. The next time I turned the switch on, I was ready to go home, in fact, it was the time I was expected to be at home. You guessed it, it spit and sputtered once again. It sounded as if water was in the fuel and I knew it was very low on fuel. This time, it sputtered to a halt.

A few weeks earlier, I had made a cross for my new neighbors across the road, and delivered it to them to get really introduced. They gave me a card that had their picture on it and the card was very colorful, so I put it in the front of my day timer. Sure enough, in less than five minutes my new friend was sitting in the driveway with a five gallon container of fresh diesel. Was it God? Without question, and I am so accustomed to this sort of thing happening, that it seems it is as natural as breathing.

Which brings to mind a story that came with one of the last crosses that I had gifted to a young lady at my bank. She responded, "Oh, I needed this today", which is one of the most common responses. But, it also brought this story that inspired me. "The last cross that I was given was from my Dad, who gave me a cross to hang in the car when I turned sixteen and got my Driver's License." What a great Dad for marking that momentous moment with a cross that has LOVE and protection flowing from it. Thank you Jesus!

Are you giving crosses away yet? It is all about blessing others and helping them strengthen their relationship with their Creator. And, maybe, one of the crosses you give away will lead to thousands of souls being touched. But, if it is only one other person who has his life touched, it will be a huge credit to your account in the Kingdom. We put this in the form of a prayer, and ask it all in Jesus Name.
